An Advertiſement to the Chriſtian Reader, concerning the occaſion of compoſing and publiſhing this Concordance, together with the manifold uſe thereof.

Uch is the excellency of Scripture-learning, in which conſiſteth the ſoule of true Divinity, that we may ſay of it, as the [a] Philoſopher ſpake concerning the knowledge of the ſoule of man: A ſmall and dimme knowledge of it is to bee valued farre above a greater meaſure of clearer inſight in any other ſcience. For the inſpired Oracles of God containe in them the infallible rule of faith, the unmoveable ground of hope, the perfect guide of life, the ſacred fewell of devotion, the divine ſubject of contemplation, the everlaſting ſpring of celeſtiall conſolation. The Canonicall bookes of the Old and New Teſtament are exact Mappes of the heauenly Canaan, drawne by the penſill of the Holy Ghoſt, the authenticall Records of the Church, the Deedes of Almighty God, and Euidences of mans ſalvation. In the peruſall wherof they who take not exceeding great delight & comfort (it is to bee feared) are either wholly earthly, and minde not heaven: or have little aſſurance of any divine Legacy bequeathed to themſelves there. But the children of promiſe, who will not forgoe their hope of heaven for all that the earth can afford, are never ſatisfied in reading over and over day and night, the ſeverall Chapters of the holy Bible, which are as ſo many Codicils, by which their Heavenly Father bequeatheth to them much treaſure of grace here, and ſeverall Crownes of glory in his Kingdome hereafter. In which regard they claime them as their [b] heritage for ever, they eſteeme them [c] above gold, yea much fine gold: and therefore Saint [d] Ierome calleth them a casket of Iewels: Let theſe Iewels, ſaith he, alwayes hang upon thy necke, and at thine eares. They are alſo ſweeter to their taſte than the honey and the honey combe; and therefore devout Saint [e] Auſtin termeth them banquetting diſhes, ſaying, Let thy Scriptures be my delicacies, let mee never be deceived in them, nor deceive by them. With knowledge of theſe alone, wee may, and by ordering our life accordingly ſhall, goe to heaven: but but with all other learning wee may, and without this ſhall certainly to Hell. And what will it availe a man to bee excellently learned in all other things, and to be groſly ignorant in that [f] one thing which is neceſſary? What will it [g] boot a man to be wiſe to perdition, and to go to hell by booke?

f Luke 10.42.

g Aug. ib. Quid prodeſt eſſe peritum, & peritorum?

Now if ſuch bee the neceſſity and excellency of ſaving knowledge compriſed intirely in holy Scriptures, queſtionleſſe of all pious labours wee are moſt to bleſſe God for theirs, whereby theſe writings of God may bee made more cleare, eaſie, ready, and familiar unto us. For the beſt of all helpes are helpes in the beſt things.

In which kinde all that are not ſtrangers to ſacred ſtudies, accord, that Concordances are of more ſolidity than luſtre; vſe, than ſhew. As [h] the goodly toppes of trees are in the eyes of all, but not the rootes out of which they grow; and the beautifull forefronts of great Pallaces, but not the foundations which ſupport them, and the gorgeous garments of cloth of gold and tiſſue richly embroydered with variety of workes and flowers, but not the skeines of ſilke, and gold threed of which yet they are made; So it cannot be denied, but that thoſe exquiſit expoſitions of Scripture, diſcourſes upon Scripture, and deductions from Scripture, which draw all mens eyes unto them with admiration, are not a little indebted for their materials to Concordances, or ſuch like helpes of ſtudies. For though by frequent reading of holy Scriptures a man may imprint in his minde the principall heads of Doctrine, together with the courſe of Hiſtory, and moſt remarkable phraſes through the whole Bible: yet who ever charged his memory with every particular paſſage, every word with the ſeverall repetitions and acceptions thereof [i] in Scripture? whereof notwithſtanding our skilfull Bezaleels who deale with the cutting and ſetting in gold the diamonds of the divine word, make ſpeciall uſe: as Saint [k] Chryſoſtome illuſtrateth it by the example of finers of gold and ſilver, who meddle not onely with wedges, ingots, and maſſie peeces of gold, but with the ſmalleſt foyle or ray the mettall caſteth.

k Chryſ. tom. 5. λογ. ρ πολλὰς τῶ χρυσὸν τὰς ὕλας &c.

Were that the onely, which is the moſt uſuall employment of a Concordance, to ſerve as a remembrancer to helpe us out when we ſticke at a quotation, and by retaining one word, as it were laying hold on a clod to recover the whole tract or plat of holy ground, the immenſe labours of the pious compiler of this worke deſerved to be thankfully remembred by us, for thus ſteading our memory: But the uſe of his worke extendeth not onely to the helping of that faculty. They who exerciſe their invention in dilating upon any ſacred ſubject, or their judgement in diſcerning the naturall and proper ſenſe of Scripture, ſhall finde this booke ready at hand to furniſh them with that they deſire, eyther for clearing the text in moſt places, or proofe of any point of Doctrine neceſſary to ſalvation. For the ſeverall words and phraſes in holy Writ are like thoſe [l] pictures of ſilver ſpoken of in the Proverbs, in which apples of gold were incloſed: and conſequently the frame of this Concordance exhibiting to our eye all the pictures of ſilver in their ſeverall places, ſheweth us alſo where we may with eaſe take out the apples of gold. To explaine this a little to ſuch as are either utterly unacquainted with collections of this nature, or caſt an eye of ſcorne upon them (and yet none make more uſe in ſecret of them than they); if in their reading the Bible they fall upon ſome perplexed ſentence & obſcure place, let them according to the [m] direction of S. Auſtin, ſeek for other parallel texts or places of Scripture, in which the ſame matter is ſet down more plainly and evidently. For as the Sun is beſt deſcryed by his own beames, ſo the Scripture is beſt expounded by Scripture. But if they cannot meete with any parallel ſentence, let them then ſingle out that word or words, the ambiguity wherof cauſes obſcurity in the ſentence. This word or words let them ſearch in their Concordance, and obſerue in each place where they read it, the ſeverall ſignifications therof, and among them let them make choiſe of that which upon due examination they finde beſt agreeth with the analogie of faith, the ſcope of the place, and circumſtances of the text. Againe, if their thoughts fixe upon any ſimple theame (as the Logicians call it) and they deſire in their meditation to proſecute it through all the topicks, and in their way knocke at all the doores of arguments, definition, diviſion, parts, cauſes, effects, ſubjects, adjuncts, oppoſites; they ſhal need but to trace the word with the Synonima's in their Concordance, and they cannot miſſe of what may be found in Scripture for their purpoſe. Or if in their method they would handle thema complexum or compoſitum, (which in the underſtanding is a compoſition, but in ſpeech a propoſition) let them but reſolve the propoſition into the ſimple termes of which it conſiſteth, and as the Concordance pointeth, turne to thoſe texts in the Bible in which thoſe ſimplices termini, or equivalent, occurre; ſo they ſhall ſoone gather what the treaſury of Gods Word yeeldeth, eyther for the explication, confirmation, or application of that doctrinall principle or concluſion. Thus may they make their Concordance a nurſery garden to ſtore them with choiſe plants and flowers of Paradiſe, I meane divine allegations. In regard of which profit, or rather neceſſity of Concordances, we reade that Origen who wrote the firſt Commentary upon holy Scripture, made alſo the firſt Concordance in Greek (though ſomewhat of another nature, and with much more toyle, becauſe out of manie tranſlations:) Since his time many have aſſayed a worke ſemblable thereunto in Latin. But Henr. Stephanus his maſter-piece, as it were to make good his name, like that Oration of Demoſthenes de corona, carrieth away the garland from them all.

I foreſee what ignorance or malevolence may object againſt this worke: that our preſſes are overpreſt with Engliſh bookes already, what need we then to put them to more torture, and make them groane under ſo heavie a bulke as this is in Engliſh?

[n] Quis leget hæc? min tu iſtud ais? nemo, herculè nemo: vel duo vel nemo. For whom is this worke? Schollars can haue recourſe to Concordances in in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. And the illiterate as little need this work, as they can make use of it. To this objection the diligent Composer hereof might answer as Lucilius in Tulli, that [o] he wrote not his bookes for the most learned, or for the most unlearned, but for the middle sort. They were not for the first sort, and the latter were not for them. The former were too sharp sighted, and could spy the smallest errors, the latter were too dull & short sighted, they could not see that wch was good in them. The one would not stoup so low, & the other could not reach so high.

But I dare undertake, if they will indifferently and with equity consider of this work, the Author may deservedly expect thanks of all sorts, and they reape benefit by him. To begin at the lower end: There is none that can reade English, but may helpe himselfe by this Concordance to perfect his sacred collections or divine notes, and readily therby find any place of Scripture wherof he remembreth any word, having forgot the quotation. For example; If he remember that he hath read or heard this phrase in one of the Prophets, He will cast all our sins into the depth of the sea, and desireth to finde it, that he may meditate upon the place for his further comfort; let him take this book, and search the words Sea, & depths, & sins, & over passing the books of Moses, Chronicles, Psalms, &c. follow the words in the Prophets, where at Micha ch. 7. ver. 19. he shall meet with what he seekes for. Likewise if any imperfect or broken passage out of the Evangelists or Apostles run in his mind, let him cull out the principal word which he retaineth in his memory (the other having slipped him) and let him confine his search in the Concordance to the Gospels or Epistles, and with great facility hee will light upon the whole sentence desired by him. By the manifold allegations in the New Testament out of the Old, and declarations of them, and allusions vnto them, he may much confirme his faith in the harmony of Scripture, and consent of the New Testament with the Old. As also by the frequent repetition of the same doctrines, and often inculcating the same dueties (sometimes in the same words) in Scripture, he may learne both to bewaile our naturall forgetfulnesse of those things that most concerne us, and take more speciall notice of the most necessary doctrines of faith, and directions for our life.

Now let me ascend higher, and crave leave to informe or remember the learned; that they haue also their share, at least in some part, of the crop of this harvest. For though they be well acquainted with the Concordances and translations in the learned languages; yet their mother tongue, in which they heare the Scriptures perpetually read both publikely & privately, cannot but be more ready to them, and fresh in their memory. Neither will the Concordances in the learned languages give them that satisfaction they expect; for, as [p] Reuchlin spake of the languages themselves, The Hebrewes drinke out of springs, the Greekes out of the riuers, and the Latins of fens: so those which make use of the Hebrew Concordance of the Old Testament, are like those who drink water out of a most pure fountaine; those which use the Greek according to the Septuagints translation, or any other, are like those who drink out of riuers,

vers, in ſome places muddy, in others brackiſh, yet for the moſt part not unwholſome: But they who uſe the Latin vulgar, are like thoſe who drinke out of fens or marſhes, in which the water is every where foule, and in many places unwholſome and infectious. And therefore albeit the [q] Trent Conventicle hath Canonized that tranſlation, and Anathematized all ſuch as upon any pretext whatſoever reject it: yet the learned, even among the Ieſuites, in their Commentaries familiarly leave it, though with reſpective language, and upon faire termes.

And as Pope Leo the tenth before that Synod ſet Arius Montanus on work to tranſlate the whole Bible anew out of the Hebrew, and allowed Eraſmus tranſlation (of the New) often interfering with the vulgar: So Pope Clement the Eighth, ſince that Councel, made bold to correct the edition of Sixtus his predeceſſor (on whom the Councell impoſed that taske, to reviſe & ſet forth the vulgar agreeably to their determination) in more than a thouſand places; and yet hee himſelfe hath left large gleanings for thoſe that ſhall follow him in the like animadverſions. The truth whereof is ſo evident and undeniable, that the publiſher of the Concordance out of this vulgar tranſlation, Anno 1600. in his Preface, complaineth that he wrote after a bad copy. The [r] old Interpreter, ſaith he, ſeemeth rather to follow the ſenſe than the words, and oftentimes departs from both, as it clearly appeares by compuring it with the Latin tranſlations of Pagnin, Arius Montanus, and other moſt learned Interpreters, and with the Hebrew and Greeke Originals.

Neither let any imagine that in thus laying open the nakedneſſe of this vulgar Latin, I diſgrace St. Ierom, whoſe name this tranſlation beareth; for ſince his putting forth this verſion (if ever it were his, and not rather an Olla podrida of many corrupt Latin tranſlations, ſome made by Catholikes, and ſome by Heretikes) it hath been ſo altered almoſt in every Chapter, that it no more deſerveth to be called his, than that famous weather-beaten barke of Athens, to bee called Theſeus his ſhip, which indeed at the firſt was built by him, but in proceſſe of yeeres was ſo often repaired and rigged, that it had never a planke the ſame remaining which it had at the firſt.

The innumerable corruptions in this Latin vulgar, additions to the Hebrew, noted in Stephanus his edition, Anno 1532. by Obeliſks; and detractions from the Hebrew, noted by Aſteriſks, were a principall motive to mee to encourage the Author of this Concordance to proceed in perfecting this his worke; that in ſtead of a Concordance moſt in uſe, collected out of a moſt corrupt tranſlation, wee might by his unwearied paines have a compleat one out of the moſt pure. To the price whereof they whoſe ability will not reach, may at a ſmall rate furniſh themſelves with the abbridgment thereof annexed to the Bible.

Since this worke was taken in hand, I confeſſe I underſtood of two other Concordances, the one in Engliſh by Mr. Iohn Marbeck, dedicated to King Edward the Sixt; the other in Latin, fitted to Tremelius and Iunius tranſlation, but neither gave me full ſatisfaction. That of Mr. Marbeck is very imperfect, pointing to Chapters, but not to Verſes. That out of Tremelius is appropriated to one edition, & cannot be very usefull to those who have not that edition, in regard of the exceeding great variety which may be observed in the severall editions by Iunius, still endeavouring to better his translation. Howsoever, that Concordance is only for those who have attained a good measure of knowledge in the Latin tongue, and that translation is only used by Schollars in their studies; whereas the translation out of which this English is gathered, is publikely read in Churches, and in all families. And as Iunius his translation had the advantage of all former from whom it borrowed light, so this for the same reason hath the advantage of Iunius his translation, and is undoubtedly the most correct translation extant. The Translators were many, and very eminent in their faculty; the time they spent in it was much, and their care & diligence extraordinary. To speak nothing of the living, whose vertues may be in the eye of envie, and therefore their commendation subject to the tongue of detraction: I can upon my owne knowledge testifie of the deceased Phenix of our University and Colledge Doctor Rainolds his industry, who followed that pious work with that intention of spirit and vigilance, that hee thereby much impayred his strength, and neere the end of it ended his dayes; and in the translation of the Booke of life, was himselfe translated to a better life: To which, he who is the way, the truth, and the life, bring all those who love the way of truth in sincerity.

To the Reader concerning the Benefit of this CONCORDANCE.

Christian Reader,

Blindneſſe of mind is not the leaſt part of miſery that ſin hath brought upon man: which is ſo much the greater, by reaſon of the more than Cymmerian darkneſſe which hath poſſeſſed the world: ſo as a man, not inlightened, living all his daies in the world, muſt needs, ſome time or other, fall into utter darkneſſe. Only Gods word is a light to our feet, Pſal. 119.105. And it hath ſuch a divine efficacie accompanying it, as it enlightneth the eyes, Pſal. 19.8. Worthy it is therefore ſo to bee read and ſtudied, as readily on all occaſions the directions and conſolations therof may eaſily be applyed: which if it were done, ſuch helps as now are neceſſary, would be leſs needfull. Our careleſneſſe is the cauſe of the neceſsity of ſuch helps, as by the Divine indulgency are afforded unto vs. Inſtance Intemperancy, the cauſe of ſo many skilful Phyſicians: and Injuſtice, the cauſe of ſo many learned Iudges and Counſellors. On this ground Plato accounted thoſe places miſerable, where were many Iudges and Phyſitians, becauſe he ſuppoſed that there muſt needs be much Injuſtice and Intemperancie. Herein he cenſured, not the means of redreſſe, but the cauſe of the neede of thoſe meanes. Thus may wee lament the cauſes of the great need that there is of ſo many Teachers, many Commentaries, many Common-place-bookes, and many Concordances. Were we as perfect in the holy Scriptures as we ſhould, and might bee by ſtudy and prayer, many helpes that are now of ſingular uſe, would be but as ſtaves to ſteddy and ſtrong men. But the caſe being as it is, and is like to be, ſo long as the world laſteth, very commendable and profitable is the paines that is taken (to omit other helpes) in compoſing Concordances of the Bible. Large Concordances have heretofore been made in the three languages of learning, Hebrew on the Old Teſtament, Greeke on the New, and Latine on both. Becauſe Latine is now the moſt common language throughout Chriſtendome, many, as well Papiſts as Proteſtants (as Hugo Cardinalis, Alberſtadius, Franſc. Lucæ, Pellicanus, Bullocus, and others) have laboured in this ſoile. But among others, the Stephens, Robert and Henry, have gone beyond all in skill and paines; inſomuch as their Concordances, eſpecially the laſt of Henry Stephen, juſtly bear this Title, Maximæ & abſolutiſsimæ Concordantiæ, The largeſt and perfecteſt Concordances. Robert Stephen the father moſt diligently ſearched out all the words of holy Scripture in the cõmon Latine tranſlation, and ſet them down in an alphabetical order, more fully than ever before: Henry Stephen the ſon hath accurately diſtinguiſhed words of divers ſignifications, and ſo compoſed them under their diſtinct heads. A great helpe, at leaſt to yong Students in Divinitie. Such hath the profit of Concordances been found to be, as they have beene compoſed in ſundry other languages. There have been many yeeres ſince Engliſh Indexes of proper Hebrew & Greeke Names, with their ſignifications, and Tables of the principall points contained in the Bible, and ſome ſo large, as they carry the title of Concordances; (amongſt which, the briefe Concordance lately collected by Mr. Iohn Downham, Batchelor in Divinity, and allowed by Authority to be bound with the Bible in all Volumes, may well deſerve the precedencie;) Yet have they come ſhort of the uſe of perfect Concordances, which is to point out, not principall points only, but euery particular point in holy Scripture. By a perfect Concordance, if thou remembreſt but one word of a ſentence which thou deſireſt to know, thou maiſt bee directed to finde out the whole ſentence, and the place where it is, that ſo not by the bare words, but by the dependance of them, thou maiſt finde out the true ſenſe. By a perfect Concordance thou maiſt know what words and phraſes are rarely, what frequently uſed, yea, how oft any word is uſed; a point wherein the Iewes were very skilfull. By a perfect Concordance thou maiſt ſoone finde out proofes for every principle of Chriſtian Religion, and ſo have thy faith the more firmely ſettled thereon. By a perfect Concordance thou maiſt ſoone diſcerne what points the holy Ghoſt moſt urgeth and inculcateth: and thereupon what are moſt diligently to be obſerved, and moſt carefully to be heeded by thee. By a perfect perfect Concordance some supply may be made of mens too much negligence in reading the Scripture, and of their ignorance following thereon. Many other Commodities of good Concordances might be added to these, wherein they much excell all Indexes, Tables, Common-places, Epitomes, Abbreviaries, and such other meaner helpes for finding out the golden Mines of the Scripture. Hereby iudge what a Treasure our English Church hath wanted a long while, and what at length it hath gained by the indefatigable industry of the Compoſer of this Concordance; wherein all the words and phraſes of the Bible are ſo fully and diſtinctly ſet downe, as in regard of our Engliſh tongue it well deſerveth the fore-mentioned ſtyle of Henry Stephens laſt Latine Concordance. This Concordance is compoſed according to the laſt and beſt Tranſlation of the Engliſh Bible, which is now moſt in uſe; and in that reſpect alſo this Concordance muſt needes bee of better uſe than any that euer was before it. If any ſhall obiect and ſay, that there can bee no great neede of an Engliſh Concordance, becauſe Concordances are for Divines, and they have helpe enough from the fore-mentioned Concordances in Hebrew, Greeke, and Latine. I anſwer, That all of all ſorts, Divines and others, may make very good uſe of a Concordance in their mother tongue. For firſt, I doubt whether all that carry the name, and are in the place of Divines (O the miſerie of this learned age, wherein there is ſuch abundance of able Divines!) can well uſe Concordances in the learned languages. To ſuch, a Concordance in Engliſh may be uſefull: As for others, I ſuppoſe that ſuch Divines as are well exerciſed in the Originall Tongues, may notwithſtanding bee beſt acquainted with their mother tongue, and that the phraſes thereof are moſt familiar to them. As for the Latine, there are many Tranſlations therein, which much differ in words and phraſes, ſo as in ſearching Latine Concordances, they may oft miſſe what they ſeeke. But this Engliſh Concordance, being taken out of the laſt Tranſlation, which is now moſt, if not altogether in uſe, they may ſoone find herein what they ſeeke; in which reſpect the beſt learned may make good uſe, even of this Engliſh Concordance. As for Lay-men, even ſuch as are ignorant of the learned Languages, their faith is, or ought to be grounded on the holy Scriptures, and Rules for their life fetched from thence. When they therefore remember a word or phraſe of a comfortable Promiſe, or of an uſefull Direction, or of a needefull Hiſtory, or when they heare ſuch Points briefly quoted by Preachers or others, and would gladly know where to finde it, that they may againe and againe reade it, and further meditate thereon, a Concordance in the mother Tongue (and none but ſuch an one) is of excellent uſe to them. Thus this Concordance being uſefull to all, let it be uſed by all. And God give a bleſſing to the right uſe thereof.

Thine,
W. Gouge.
